Overview

Why is Cyprus importing LNG?

Until it is able to develop its own gas, Cyprus is planning to import LNG to replace heavy fuel oil and diesel in power generation. Not only is this expected to bring the cost of electricity down, but it will also lead to a substantial reduction in carbon dioxide emissions, helping Cyprus achieve its Paris Agreement pledges.

Why should Cyprus use natural gas?

Cyprus Energy Minister George Papanastasiou said that the project is central to the reduction in energy-related carbon emissions, to lower electricity prices, and to the success of electricity market liberalisation. He also said that the future use of natural gas from Cyprus' own gas fields is still part of the country's strategy for the future.

Is natural gas a new industry in Cyprus?

Natural gas discoveries in both the Exclusive Economic Zone (EEZ) of Cyprus and its immediate neighbourhood over the last decade have spurred on a new industry in Cyprus providing new opportunities for business and foreign investment.

Why is Cyprus becoming a regional fuel hub?

Concurrently, Cyprus is also developing into a regional fuel hub for Europe, Asia and Africa, thanks mainly to the successful operation of the sophisticated oil storage terminal by Netherlands-based global oil terminal company VTTI.
